(2 of 2)

MYTHS: Once a person is suicidal, they are suicidal forever.

MYTHS: Improvement following a suicidal crisis means the risk is over.

FACTS: Many suicides occur within 90 days after the beginning of “improvement” when they seem to have the energy to act on morbid thoughts and feelings. The desire to escape life may be so great that the idea of suicide represents relief from a hopeless situation. Therefore, we must be particularly attentive to the suicidal individual.

MYTH: Talking to someone about suicidal feelings will cause them to commit suicide.

FACTS: Talking to someone about their suicidal feelings usually makes the person feel relieved that someone finally recognized their emotional pain and they feel safer talking about it.

WHAT NOT TO DO...

- Don't leave the person alone or send the person away
- Don't overact – don't be shocked by anything he (she) says.
 - You don't have to explore all of the details, get enough information to your care, concern, and willingness to listen non-judgmentally
- Don't rush-remember, you are just trying to establish contact and get the person to someone who can help; you are not trying to completely resolve the crisis
- Don't minimize the person's concerns: "this is not worth killing yourself over." Remember to acknowledge: "I see this is very upsetting to you and I want to get help for you."
- Don't discount or make light of the suicidal threat: "you don't really want to kill yourself."
- Don't argue whether suicide is right or wrong.
- Don't preach or moralize: "you have everything to live for." The issue is the problem or bind the person feels he (she) is in, not life and death

WHAT NOT TO DO...

- Don't challenge or get into a power struggle. You will do everything you can to get help right now, but ultimately he (she) has control over his decision
- Don't think the person just needs reassurance. You can reassure that you will get help
- Don't promise to keep the conversation confidential. There is limited confidentiality in life-threatening situations
- Remember that all persons who are at risk for suicide need help. It is always better to overreact (in terms of taking action) than to fail to take action. It is better to have someone angry with you or embarrassed than dead.

REMEMBER...

- > KNOW YOUR PEOPLE
- > RECALL THE CLUES

LET'S TAKE ACTION NOW!

SORRY
